A PILGRIMAGE TO PIKE'S PEAK.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier:

No person who has visited Colorado for pleasure but has at least desired to make the ascent of the peak which gave the name to the gold mines of the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains. But few make the ascent, comparatively speaking, for the reason, probably, that, as in the early settlement of Colorado it was a remarkable feat to reach the top, it is supposed it still must be so; and a large number of tourists every season gaze with longing looks at the snow-edged summit of the Peak, without feeling the ability to reach the height of their ambition (something over 14,300 feet). It is for the benefit of such that I give the actual experience of a party of "pilgrims" who, without having the fear of failure or untold hardship before their eyes, started on the fifteenth of August the present year, to make the ascent or ignominiously fail by the [illegible].

The party consisted of four ladies and six gentlemen. We left Colorado Springs about sunrise, equipped with all the winter clothing, blankets, cooking utensils and food that it was possible to carry upon seven horses, leaving barely room enough for the riders to secure passage, and took the Government trail up Bear Canon. At the lower falls the wagon road ends, and the ladies left the security of the wagon for the more precarious mode of travel, i. e. horseback, and commenced the ascent of the first mountain. The trail is in very good order, and although somewhat steep in places, had only an appearance of being dangerous from the proximity to the edge of the canon, where the water writhed and twisted five hundred feet below. The scenery up Bear Canon is magnificent; falls of all sizes met our eyes at every turn, bringing from the ladies startling exclamations of "Oh! isn't that lovely?" About ten o'clock we arrived at Jones' Park, a romantic summer retreat only to be reached upon foot or horseback, no wagon ever having been within its bounds. Here are some fine old forest trees scattered over perhaps eighty acres of valley land while younger trees in clumps around the edge hedge in the view on either side, and the stream of clear cold water, formed from mountain springs, ripples and dashes through the park with a ceaseless murmur.

About noon we reached the head of Bear Creek and stopped at a spring of ice cold water for dinner; but before the meal was spread (on a blanket), one of those mountain showers that seem watching for "pilgrims," came down on our devoted heads, and the way we improvised a shelter out of blankets and an old wagon cover, would have brought tears (of laughter) to the eyes of an old mountaineer. The shower being a light one, did not last long, and by the time the things were repacked and the horses saddled we were ready to push on to the Lake House, where we arrived about three o'clock. The Lake House is built upon the bank of Moraine lake, a lovely sheet of water about twelve acres wide and forty feet deep, hemmed in by lofty mountains in full view of Pike's Peak towering four thousand feet above it, though only four and three-fourths miles from the top. Here is one of the most lovely places for a summer resort, and is destined to be, at no distant day, a more comfortable if not a more fashionable resort, than Saratoga or Long Branch. Messrs. Copley & France, who own the trail, house and lake, have placed Mr. L. C. Dana in charge, whom we found a very agreeable and accommodating gentleman.

From this place we pushed on to timber line, about two thousand feet below the top of the peak, and left a part of our baggage and one horse that the light air had rendered unfit for service, then started in light marching order, the footmen in advance, over the long, level stretch of short grass and flowers, to where the real ascent begins. One of the ladies began to lose her breath and became dizzy about one thousand feet above timber line, and complained of the cold (which was beginning to make even the footmen shiver) and it seemed at one time as though she must go back; but resolution was too strong for light air, and in the midst of a blinding snow storm she reached the top, completely chilled and unable to articulate. Two of those who walked a good part of the way claimed that they felt no bad effects from the light air. We hurried into the Signal house, where Mr. T. J. O'Keefe, a cadet of the naval school at Annapolis, welcomed us to a warm room and a roaring fire, and cheerfully gave up his room to the ladies, who were now unable to sit up. As the storm still continued we decided it would be unwise to attempt the descent with them that night, and so obtained permission to remain and sent the horses down to timber line by the boys, who found it no pleasure to face a blustering snow storm, even in August.

After supper we had a glimpse of winter sunset and the ladies retired to their room. K. and myself sat by the fire while Mr. O'Keefe sent off his reports to Washington, after which he joined us and from him I gathered the following facts. The station is in command of Sergeant J. V. Brown, who has the reputation of being the most gentlemanly and accommodating officer who has been stationed there, and his able and agreeable assistants, T. B. Bowles and J. T. O'Keefe, who keep a record of all the changes of weather and report three times a day to Washington. These reports are sent off at 5.42 A. M., 2.42 and 9.07 P. M., giving changes of barometer and thermometer, the direction and force of wind, rain and snow fall, clouds and such other matters as may come within their observation. The Peak is 14,336 feet above sea level, according to the latest measurements, but no two give it the same height. The snow never melts entirely from the Peak, and the warmest time this summer was a little over 50° Fahrenheit. This station was established in the fall of 1873, since which time reports have been sent every day.—The first visitor this year, as recorded in the visitors' book, was May 11th, since which time five hundred have reached the top, the majority of whom have gone up the government trail, which, though the longest, is the only way to go on horses, the shorter trail by Manitou being too steep for horses above timber line. Manitou Springs are eight thousand feet below the top, and eleven miles by the trail, but it will be but a few years before a wagon road from Manitou to Lake Moraine will carry a person so near the top that the daily ascent of the Peak will be prescribed for invalids whose principal disease is, in plain language, laziness. Then a fine hotel will replace the one which now "gets away camping," and the sail boat of civilization will replace the log raft that now takes the tourist across the lake, while anglers will line the shore to tempt [illegible] the black bass and trout with which the proprietor will stock it.

About eleven o'clock the moon came out bright and gave us such a view as is seldom seen, even by those stationed there. The clouds had dropped below us until we seemed to be upon an island, surrounded by an ocean of silver waves rolling toward us and threatening to submerge the small space we occupied, only a few feet above them. At daylight we equipped ourselves in shawls, blankets and overcoats, to see the sunrise, and although shivering with cold and standing in the newly fallen snow, the beauty of the sunrise was appreciated as never before. In the east the "plains" stretched out for 150 miles, looking a level meadow, while shiny lines across in all directions marked the water courses, and bright spots indicated lakes and ponds, and beyond these rose a monstrous globe of molten gold which, casting shadows across the country, gave us an ever-changing picture which will not soon be forgotten, and turning to the west we saw the shadow of the Peak reaching far across South Park towards the snowy mountains beyond.

After breakfast we engaged in that amusement of boys of all ages, rolling rocks down the mountain. In one place, with the aid of iron bars, we detached a fragment of granite weighing several tons, which went rolling and tearing across snow that had lain perhaps for ages upon its northern slope. The horses having arrived, we bade good-by to the mountain top and started to put ourselves upon a level with other people, who, for one night at least, we considered ourselves above. The descent was so steep that the whole party started on foot, leading the horses until we reached timber line, where we repacked and rode to the lake. Here we stopped for dinner, after which Mr. Dana took the raft and gave the ladies a boat ride, which was highly appreciated, but as I had been informed that the water was very wet, I declined to trust my precious body upon so frail a support and lost the honor of boat-riding over 10,000 feet above salt water.

While getting ready for a start a sudden shower from the north made it a question whether to proceed or to stop at the Lake House until the rain was over. We decided to proceed towards the lower regions, but a pelting hail storm soon dismounted us and almost drove the horses frantic, and while the ladies hastened for shelter beneath rocks and trees, the men hung with tenacious grip to our means of transportation. The hail lasted until the ground was covered with icy fragments and we were all dripping, with all the snappish part of our dispositions on top, then we mounted and started on through the rain, as forlorn looking as though a rich uncle had died and left us nothing but his blessing. But sunshine always follows the shower, and before reaching the wagon road we had dried our clothes and regained our spirits, and taking the wagons we reached home about sunset, as jolly a lot of pilgrims as ever climbed a mountain or got drenched in a shower.

DRUNKENNESS IN IRELAND

[From the Pall Mall Gazette.]

All judicial authorities agree that drunkenness is the main source and cause of crime in Ireland, and the inspectors-general of prisons in that country call attention in their report of the past year just issued to the progressive increase in the number of commitments to county and borough jails for that vice since 1867, when they numbered only 6,645; in 1868 they reached 7,034; in 1869, 7,510; in 1870 they rose to 8,963; in 1871 to 9,409; in 1872 they 8,110; in 1873 they were 9,774; but during 1874 they increased to 14,006—an increase over 1867 of 7,363. It must likewise be borne in mind that the above numbers do not include the committals for drunkenness to bridewells, of which, however, there is a reduction of 5,083 in 1874 as compared with 1867 the number having been in that year 7,824. In 1870 they were 7,056, in 1871 they were 5,652, in 1873 they numbered 2,186, in 1874 they again increased to 2,430. The diminution of the number of drunkards committed to bridewells during the past years and the increase of those committed to goal may be attributable in some degree to the result of the Licensing act, 37 and 38 Vict., cap. 69, which enables magistrates to impose longer sentences than heretofore on habitual drunkards, in which cases the periods of imprisonment are generally spent in the county or borough gaols when the sentence exceeds forty-eight hours. Experience shows that habitual drunkards are not deterred by repeated short terms of imprisonment, which are only sufficient to enable the drunkard to receive medical treatment, and facilitate his recovery from the results of his debauch; it is therefore suggested by the inspectors-general that in all cases of habitual drunkenness a lengthened imprisonment be imposed for that offence, and they further express their opinion that power should be given to justices to imprison for drunkenness without as well as with the option of a fine.

A "CONSERVATIVE OPINION" ON THE MISSISSIPPI OUTRAGE.

The New York Herald declares that one such outrage like that at Clinton does more to keep away the kind of people whom Mississippi need than all the efforts of all her citizens can do in years to draw them thither. With a justice and boldness which might well be emulated by papers of higher moral pretensions, the Herald says:

"The white people of Mississippi ought to understand that the Northern people are very impatient under such things. They do not wish the least harm to the Southern whites. We are all ready here to say that the war is over, and to let bygones be bygones. But such outrages as that of the fourth of July at Vicksburg, and at Clinton on Saturday, arouse bad blood here in the North. We remarked the other day that the folly of the Ohio Democrats was scaring the people back into the Republican party, and was putting that party into the hands of its least scrupulous men. But these Mississippi brutalities do even more than Allen and Pendleton to this end. Again, the whites of Mississippi would do well to remember that it is not prudent to goad even a long subject and naturally mild race to extremes. By such wanton attacks on peaceable colored people as are but frequent there, they are arousing a devil that some day may rise upon them in fury. They cannot go on forever permitting injustice and outrage toward a weaker race."

THE CHINESE AT HOME.

The domestic and social life of the Chinese has, perhaps, more features in common with Western nations than that of other Oriental peoples. Although polygamy exists among the wealthier classes, and their women generally live in seclusion, family life is much esteemed and cultivated among them. The first wife has the full control of the household, while the concubines are little more than servants and housemaids. The Chinese illustrate the relation by comparing the wife to the moon and the concubines to the stars, both of which, in their appropriate spheres, revolve around the sun. The utmost respect and obedience to the behests of their parents are enjoined to children. The betrothment of the children is entirely in the hands of the parents, and the obligation of the former to fulfil the contract made by the latter is enforced by law, even to the annulling of an agreement made by a son himself in ignorance of the arrangements of his parents. Cleanliness is not among the virtues of the Chinese, either in regard to their habitations or their persons. The poorest people do not change their garments until they are worn out. Their dress is neither so uniform nor so unchanging as is generally supposed. Fashions alter there as well as elsewhere, but not so rapidly as among European nations. If it were not for the shaven crown and braided tail of the men, and the crippled feet of the women, little fault could be found with their costume, combining as it does warmth and ease. The garments of the sexes differ more by their colors than by their shape and cut. The diet of the Chinese is sufficient in variety, wholesome, and well cooked, though many of their dishes would appear insipid to the taste of Europeans and Americans. The proportion of animal food is probably smaller among them than among any other race in the same latitudes. Cooking is almost esteemed as a science in China. The Chinaman considers the Englishman's mode of feeding the nearest approach to that of the savages of Formosa, "for," says he, "the Englishman does the chief work of the slaughter-house upon his dinner-table, and he counts the principal work of the kitchen to his stomach."—Appletons' American Cyclopedia, revised edition, article "China."

THE HERMANN MONUMENT.

This great work, the product of the genius of Joseph Ernst Von Bandel, was begun on the 9th of July, 1838—thirty-seven years ago—and completed on the 23d of June 1875. The cost of the entire monument will be about 90,000 thalers. The dimensions of the monument are as follows: The height of the Gothic structure on which the figure of Herrman stands is ninety-three feet; the figure itself is ninety feet high, making the total height 183 feet. It is, therefore, sixty feet higher than the Marcus Aurelius column in Rome, and exceeds that of Trajan by fifty-five feet. The substructure is a round, massive, tapering Gothic pile, supported by ten stout pillars and crowned by a cupola flattened at the top for the reception of the figure. The dome is surrounded by a gallery four feet wide, upon which 300 people can stand, and up to which sixty-nine steps lead and twenty-eight other steps go still higher, to the summit of the dome. In the niches of its superstructure appear very interesting and characteristic inscriptions and memorials. In one is a relief of the Emperor William I., the model of which was made by Von Bandel in 1872, it was cast from bronze cannon captured at Gravelotte, and presented to Von Bandel by the emperor himself. The head is in profile, without ornamentation. Above it are the words "Wilhelm Kaiser," over this, in smaller characters to the left "22d March. 1797," to the right. "King of Prussia, 2d January, 1861." Under the head, "Proclaimed Kaiser. Versailles 18th January, 1871." To the left again the inscription. "War, 17th July, 1870," to the right, "Peace, 26th February, 1871." An oak wreath surrounds the head; to the left of this are the names of battle fields of the last war, and in various niches are appropriate inscriptions. In another part is inscribed the name of the builder. "E. Von Bandel, 19th July, 1838; 17th June, 1846." On the 19th of July the work was commenced; on the 17th of June the last stone of the foundation was placed in position. Crossing this Gothic structure is the figure, measuring, with the iron plate on which it rests, ninety feet. Armin stands with his right arm upraised, hold aloft an immense sword; his left rests upon the shield, which is inscribed with the simple word "Treufest" (firm and true). It consists of five copper plates and weighs over a ton. The height of the body is fifty feet; from the foot to the peak of the helmet fifty-five, and from the iron basis on which the figure stands to the point of the sword, ninety feet. The single portions of the monument are of copper, and number 200 pieces. They were riveted together, and in part begun in the workshop by Von Bandel himself. The entire monument has a weight of ten or eleven tons of beaten copper. The colossal edifice is enclosed in the substructure in a very skillful and original manner. Great care was necessary in this in order to protect the monument against the great storms which sweep over the forest. The costume of the statue is simple yet becoming—a jerkin trimmed with fur, a short mantle, fastened on the breast, falling gracefully over the shoulder. The limbs are clad in leather; on the feet are laced shoes, also trimmed with fur. The winged helmet is characteristic of the Roman military training which Hermann had enjoyed in his youth. The statue is a grand, commanding one.

STATE NEWS.

Aroostook.

Last week a number of ex-soldiers of Aroostook county met at Presque Isle to organize a military company. Ninety-six veterans were present and enrolled themselves. A committee was chosen to secure enlistments. The meeting adjourned to Sept. 30.

The Sunrise says that the Caribou people have completed a contract with the River du Loup Railway Company for the building of a railroad from Presque Isle to the village of Caribou. The agreement is that the town is to give the right of way, grade, bridge and sleeper the road, and the Company will then put on the rails, furnish the rolling stock and run it. They propose to begin work within ten days. Messrs. Arnold and King have just returned from Fredericton, where the contract was effected.

The Press says that the man [illegible] arrested in Portland the other day for having in his possession a trunk full of new clothing, has acknowledged that his name is Mahlon A. Clute, and that he broke into the store of L. C. Allen in Norway last April, where he stole these goods.

The preliminary examination in Portland began Saturday, of N. W. Randall, recently arrested at Clinton for altering one-dollar bills to fives, before U. S. Commissioner W. H. Clifford. Several witnesses were heard on both sides, and the hearing adjourned until Tuesday morning to hear the argument.

The Warren cheese factory closed its season Saturday, the 14th inst., much to the disappointment of some of its patrons, who hoped that it would be continued as had been intended, at least to the close of the present month. The reason of closing was the decline in the price of cheese, the directors fearing that they could not manufacture their milk at the price they have advertised to pay, without loss. They were receiving about 1400 lbs. per day at the time of closing. Quite an amount of cheese has been sold, all of it proving of excellent quality.

At Dresden stands the old Pownalborough court house, in a good state of preservation. It was built over a hundred years ago, and by it once stood the gallows on which was hanged the first criminal executed by process of law in Maine. The house of the judge who sat in this court is situated near the forks of the river and is fronted by some stately elms of great antiquity. It is still inhabited, and the style of its architecture, and the beautiful paneling of its interior show the magnificence which in that day appertained to the judge.

Penobscot.

The Gazette says that on Wednesday of last week, Edward and Walter Haines, of Dexter, Dr. Saville of Boston, and another person, were hunting near Thorn Brook, Kingsbury, where they were in camp. Edward first came upon some birds, gave a signal agreed upon, and supposed that he heard from the others. It appears, however, that there was a misunderstanding somewhere, for when Edward fired the two charges from his gun, Walter was in direct range, and received thirty-two shot in different parts of his body. Several of the wounds are severe, but he is now thought to be doing well.

It having been stated that the State Liquor Commissioner allowed the city of Bath to purchase their liquors in Boston, on condition that he should receive the commission allowed by law, the Bath Times says this is a mistake. The Commissioner simply said that if the liquors kept by him were not considered satisfactory by the Bath Agent he would buy such as may be wanted in case the State Assayer found them suitable for medicinal purposes. The State Commissioner says that he sells no liquors until the State Assayer has examined them and pronounced them pure, and that in every case thus far his prices have been less than liquor of the same quality could be purchased [illegible].

The Clark divorce case, involving parties from Norfolk county, Mass., which was tried at Skowhegan some months ago, has been compromised by Clark paying his wife $600 for the support of herself and child. LUXURIOUS FASHIONS.—In dress alone, American tastes become more and more luxurious. Undergarments are made of fine Foulard and Tussah silk, profusely trimmed with Valenciennes lace, the colors of delicate pale blue, lavender, rose-color and cream. Importations of this class of made-up toilet articles can scarcely fill the orders pouring in constantly, and the materials are also made to order here by fashionable modistes. Fashion, sighing for novelty, concentrates her energies on love for extravagance now on stockings and garters. Stockings are certainly exquisite in fineness and beauty of design. Lisle thread they are as filmy and delicate as a cobweb in lace and silk clockwork. But silk stockings just now command more attention, they come in such tints as pale cream-color, varying to shades of lemon, orange, scarlet and buff, again to blue, pink, purple, mauve, and sea green. The designs embroidered upon them as stripes of picture are really works of art. The instep of one style is worked with twin red cherries and round the leg a spray of pale cherry blossoms is exquisitely embroidered, another is dotted with moss rose buds in garlands; black currants with gay green twigs, strawberries, and red currants all find place in their natural colors upon these stockings, for which an enormous price is asked, and so great is the competition readily given. In the days of Marie Antoinette garters were broad, with gold fringe and point lace ends, and these are now fashionable. Garters are very elaborate in ornamentation and range in price from $5 to $50 a pair. Some of the most elegant stockings have the tops trimmed with point lace or Valenciennes ruffles; between these is clasped the garter. Garter buckles are made of gold or oxydized silver set with precious stones. [illegible] a pair of beautiful garters with the same consideration that is expended upon a pair of bracelets. Many of the most delicate in [illegible] are of white silk and trimmed with large rosettes and point appliqué; others are ornamented with the rosettes of lace and orange blossoms; garter-buckles can be purchased in pairs or attached to a variety of garters at pleasure. The new book in Paris, which ladies are now looking forward to with eagerness, is the [illegible]. It is of black velvet and very long; the legging in front all Venetian cut work embroidered with a tiny silver cord. The pink [illegible] or scarlet Pompeian silk stockings thus seen through the open clover or diamond shaped pattern. Plain stockings of decided, high colors and are all clocked on the edges of the feet and around the ankles in white silk or some strongly contrasting color. [illegible] brown stockings are clocked with bright blue or green or with violet and cardinal [illegible] black gold [illegible] and purple. Ribbed stockings are never [illegible]. Pure white and unbleached Lisle thread stockings sell at 60 cents to $1.25 [illegible]. Openwork and silk clocked they cost from 75 cents to $1.50 a pair, and lady buyers may pay according to the amount of work upon them. Plain colored lisle thread hosiery averages in price from 50 cents to $1.50. Striped stockings are being condemned for an irritation caused by the aniline dyes sometimes ending in serious evils, and so if one cannot buy the costly silk and embroidered stockings there is nothing so pretty and modest as the pure white or soft lisle thread and fine Balbriggan. The real Irish Balbriggan sells from $1 to [illegible] a pair; the British imitation from $1 to $1.25 and excellent and American bleached and unbleached in close imitation from $4 to $9 a dozen.—*N. THE ELECTION

Since the evening of election-day the Democrats have had cause to smother some of their hurrahs and the Republicans have had time to recover from the surprise that Democrats could make any gains in Maine and to discover that while our easily elated opponents are cheering themselves hoarse we still hold all the substantial fruits of victory. Many of the early reports circulated by the Democrats proved entirely false and other statements grossly exaggerated, while the later authorized returns are in nearly all instances more favorable to us.

We publish to-day returns from 253 towns giving a total vote of 81 634 against 68,251 last year. In this total the Republicans have increased their vote but 4 209, while the Democrats have increased 9 084. The proportions indicate a majority somewhat rising 4 000 this year, and as the returns embrace all the cities and larger towns the loss on the remainder of the vote will be relatively less.

Several of the counties are quite close, but the later returns show better for the Republicans. The Kennebec Journal conceded only Cumberland, Waldo and Knox to the Democrats. It is thought that we have saved Washington and Hancock by small majorities and the news from York gives us the entire county ticket and a gain of one Representative. If the Democrats carried Cumberland, Knox, Waldo, Washington, Hancock and Aroostook they would have but 12 Senators out of 31 and the House has undoubtedly a strong Republican majority.

Returns on the Congressional vote give Gen. Plaisted about 1 000 majority in Penobscot and 500 in Piscataquis. Aroostook has given a Republican majority of 500 over his or Mr. Madigan's stamping ground, which is not yet heard from, and unless the Madawaska counting is even worse than in 1878, Gen. Plaisted's majority in the District will not be less than 1 000. The Piscataquis County ticket is all right in spite of the in Penobscot.

It is a fact that the Democratic gains have been made even in the smaller towns than in the cities and larger communities showing that the greenback have been less responsive to the influences about them, in places where grog shops and their accompaniments do most abound. The country people are generally sound and it is a good sign that we are strongest with them and weakest in the lowest wards of the cities. That money has been lavishly used by the Democrats no observing person can doubt and the idea of a statement by Pillsbury as to the party corruption fund will be regarded as very amusing.

We have seen the worst, and it is enough to warn us of the danger which we have escaped. There is no evidence that any considerable portion of the Republicans of Maine have abandoned their principles to join the Democratic party, and the manner in which that dangerous organization will show its hand within a short time will dispose of all the Republican apathy which remains after the lesson of last Monday. We have now to look forward to a National contest of vital import next year, and having tested the peril of negligence, let us not delay the work of organizing for an overwhelming victory in 1876.

THE PROMOTERS AND ENCOURAGERS OF ROWDYISM.

As one of the Democratic leaders in this city think that we should have been too polite to complain of the invasion of our premises by a gang of their ruffianly adherents on election evening, we wish to state distinctly that until we hear from them one word of disapproval of the rowdyism with which we have been repeatedly annoyed we propose to hold the leaders and their ignorant and boorish followers responsible before the public. If a Democratic jubilation meeting necessarily calls out the disorderly portion of the community then the persons who assume the responsibility of gathering such a crowd and stimulating them by cheap oratory or otherwise should see to it that the peace and quiet of the city do not suffer as a consequence. When the adjournment of these gatherings is a signal for a raid of disorderly roughs upon our premises as has repeatedly been the case during a few years past we denounce the men who promote and encourage the rowdyism.

The crowd of ill-favored and worse behaved creatures who invaded our office on Monday evening to disturb the reading of dispatches to our respectable citizens so conspicuously manifested their affection for General Roberts that we had a right to feel that there would have been much more propriety in their entertainment in his parlors than in letting them loose upon our premises where they were not wanted and where they came only for the purpose of disorder. On no occasion of such rowdyism have we ever heard a word of reproof or disapproval from the Democratic party leaders but on the contrary they have either tacitly or openly encouraged it. As in other instances, so in this, the personal organ of General Roberts, edited by his most intimate political associate manifests its pleasure at our annoyance and pats the rowdies on the shoulder as follows:

That is the dignified and decorous manner in which the home organ of a Democratic candidate for the office of Governor of Maine refers to the intrusion of a gang of half drunken wretches into the office of an opposing newspaper to disturb the reputable persons present by the mingling of cat-calls with the yelling of that defeated candidate's name. Surely there is cause for thanksgiving in the fact that the State is safe even by five thousand majority.

Throughout the canvass just closed ex-Speaker Blaine has borne the brunt of the fight and been the target for all the batteries of Democratic abuse. The successive disastrous defeats of that party in Maine for more than fifteen years have been largely due to the matchless ability with which Mr Blaine has conducted the Republican campaigns and the Bourbon leaders have become maddened under the staggering blows which he has given them. To his untiring energy and sagacious efforts we owe perhaps more than to anything else the fact that the tidal-wave of apathy and reaction which swept over the country last Fall, engulfing even the Old Bay State, has been stayed in Maine and spent its force without disturbing Republican supremacy in the commonwealth. It must be a source of personal gratification to Mr. Blaine that his own city of Augusta, Kennebec County and the Third Congressional District have held up better than any other portion of the State, Kennebec and Somerset giving glorious Republican majorities very nearly equal to those of last year. It seems that "Blaineism" is anything but an element of weakness at home; and next year the hand of the "Great Republican Leader," as the Boston Post has appreciatively styled him, will fall again with mailed and crushing force upon the routed Democracy of Maine.

A Terrible Accident—Three Men Killed

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 A terrible accident occurred here to-day by which three men were killed and several others slightly injured The Aerial Ladder Co., had been ordered out for practice at the junction of East Broadway and Canal streets The ladder was raised 120 feet in the air and eight men mounted. Wm H Nash, Chief of the Battalion, being at the top while the firemen were doing their evolutions the ladder suddenly cracked and with scarcely a moment's warning, broke at the second section and those on it were precipitated to the ground. Nash was instantly killed, and Phillip Morris and William Bogbat so terribly mangle that they died while being conveyed to the station-house. Several more persons were more or less injured, but cared for by their friends

The send off was really a pretty one, but much to the surprise of the favorites, Baker's Dolliuce crept to the inside just after getting away, and took the pole from Jefferson.

Professor Marsh Before the Red Cloud Commission

WASHINGTON, Sept 14 Professor Marsh to-day before the Red Cloud Commission was questioned at length He said Boster was the real contractor for supplying beef to the Sioux agencies though he might be acting under the contract of others As an illustration a great many bids were made for supplying beef and Boster stands outside and buys out the successful bidder Boster being on the ground and having capital and all other appliances for filling contracts

Question—How is the Government defrauded as you charge if Boster does furnish the beef and complies with the contract?

Answer—If a man obtain a contract at a large price can sub let it at a lower price the difference between the two is the loss to the Government In answer to the charge that Boster is notorious for frauds in former contracts, Prof Marsh referred to Kemble and Albert's report to the Indian officers in which they say the quantity of beef actually received by the Whitestone agency was unquestionably much less than he receipted for to the contractor He also referred to the report of the House on appropriations in February 1871, in which it is stated that Boster delivered Texas instead of American cattle and was paid 6 cts for gross weight when the cattle dressed were not worth more than half that price. Fraud was also practiced by Boster in the weight of cattle The Professor said he could also give information which he himself obtained while in the West.

The Professor was asked the question whether he could state whether Boster violated the terms of any contract or failed to comply with it thus committing fraud in any bid made by him He answered not of his own knowledge, but he referred to the report of the old board of Indian Commissioners made to the President in which it was stated that contracts were sublet or permitted to be filled by an individual whose bid had been registered the previous year by the commissioner on suspicion of fraud

Prof Marsh in the course of his statement was not be judged from his experience with the Indian bureau that the Commissioner was unwilling to receive information respecting the loose management of affairs at the Red Cloud agency He said in further testimony that the Commissioner might believe what was told him about the mismanagement, but the information was kindly received He was much more apt to be indignant with the person who brought the information than with the person against whom fraud was alleged Prof Marsh having been asked whether there was anything offensive in the way in which he brought the information to the attention of the Commissioner, he replied that there was not He thought he was doing a favor in bringing the attention of the Commissioner to the face of mismanagement, but the reception greatly amazed him and but for the seeming reluctance of the Commissioner to receive complaints he should have given him all the information in his possession (At this point Commissioner Smith came into the room) what the Commissioner of Indian Affairs said would be found in his (Marsh's) statement given in New York The Commissioner doubted the truth of some of Professor Marsh's statements thinking he had been misled by statements Apart from the examples of sugar Boar and tobacco brought to the attention of the Commissioner, he could have given him other information if he had been disposed to receive it

The Hahnemann's Account of the Wreck of the Propeller Equinox.

CHICAGO Sept 14 Burr, who is supposed to be the sole survivor of the wreck of the propeller Equinox, which foundered off Point au Sable, Lake Michigan, on the morning of the 10th instant, reached this city yesterday by the schooner Haven, having been picked up by that vessel after floating 84 hours on the pilot house. Burr was helpless when he was picked up 80 miles S SW of Manitou Island last Saturday He stated to a Tribune reporter the following facts

The sea was very rough during all the night preceding the catastrophe While he was at the wheel at 1 o'clock Friday morning it was discovered that the after bulwarks were stove in, all efforts to stop the leak were unavailing and it was decided to lower the boats. At this time the schooner Emma E Wayes in tow was hailed and asked to come alongside, but she did not respond. Signals were made and lights were displayed without success. A boat was then lowered from the propeller and the mate, owner, watchman, five deck hands, an engineer and two firemen got into it, when the ship went down almost immediately Burr swam for a long distance side by side with the captain They finally reached a spar, but afterwards got separated Subsequently Burr caught the pilot house which is the second one, but the latter after holding on nearly a day became exhausted and slipped off. Burr was picked up in a very exhausted condition, but is now feeling quite comfortable.

Ready and Snaky to be Sent For.

A meeting of the Evangelical ministers of Chicago was held last night, and it was resolved to extend an invitation to Moody and Sankey to come here at once and inaugurate a work of revival

The Wreck of the Mendota.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14. The seven passengers of the steam barge Mendota, who were picked up by the schooner Addie, off Manitou, arrived here yesterday. They are Captain Fairbanks, F. W. Fairbanks, H B. Fish, Patrick Monahan, W. S Crane, Ames Ness and George McKinney. One of the crew states that at 4 o'clock Friday the waves began to break over the Mendota and she parted the line by which she was towing the barge Morning Star. The water kept gaining till 8 o'clock, when the other barge was thrown off. Soon after the boats were lowered and the engineer, his son and the first mate and seven of the crew clambed into the larger boats. The smaller one was taken by seven of the crew who almost immediately pulled away. The father and the wife of the captain were left. The father was 70 years of age and tried to reach the boat. When last seen the steward stood with his wife and went down with her. The story as related also by another of the crew, who speaks in terms of praise of the gallant and self-sacrificing conduct of the captain and his officers.

The lonesome wind of autumn grieves,
The northern lights are seen,
October sheds her changing leaves
Upon the churchyard green,
Where sitting pensive in the sun,
While fading grasses wave,
I watch the crickets leap and run
Upon a stranger's grave

Black fear and doubt profound
To rising the silence of the tomb
A more mysterious sound

Daily Established 1834 Weekly 1815,

BOUTELLE & BURR, — Proprietors

C. A. BOUTELLE, Editor

In announcing the Forty second Volume of this standard Newspaper, the Proprietors beg leave to state that during the past year they have incurred large expense in thoroughly refitting their establishment, and are determined to spare no effort in maintaining its high character as

EASTERN MAINE.

We have now one of the best appointed news paper offices in the State, have made important additions to our Editorial, Reportorial and Correspondence corps, and are in every way prepared to furnish our patrons with a

FIRST CLASS DAILY NEWSPAPER.

With facilities at our command we hope to make this favorite newspaper more interesting and acceptable during the coming year than ever before. Our connection with the ASSOCIATED PRESS, by which we receive the whole of their despatches by night and day, enables us to present in each issue

The Latest Telegraphic News from all Parts of the World.

In addition we shall be served by Special Correspondents at important points, and shall furnish

of the proceedings of Congress, the State Legislature, meetings of Agricultural Societies and other public bodies, carefully corrected Financial and Market Reports, a reliable Shipping List, original and selected Stories and Poetry, a large amount of instructive and entertaining Miscellany, and a very full department of

News of This Section and the State.

In politics the paper will continue to advocate and uphold the principles of the Republican party, while claiming to be independent, in the highest and best sense of the word. While fearless and outspoken in its treatment of all public questions and only maintaining what it believes to be right, it will avoid intolerance and make its appeals to the understanding rather than to prejudice. The year about to open will be fruitful of political events of special bearing upon the future of the country, and it will be our aim to keep our readers thoroughly informed, and to favor such measures and policy as will best promote the welfare of all the people. The great interests of

in Maine will receive special attention and all the influence of the paper will be exerted in aid of the growth and prosperity of our beloved State. Strictly excluding from our columns everything of an immoral tendency, avoid sensational matter we seek to make a thoroughly reliable paper which will find

A Welcome in Every Family Circle.

To advertisers our columns open one of the best fields in New England, our circulation being among the best classes of the people, and as this paper affords the principal medium of communication with a large and constantly increasing number of readers throughout Central and Eastern Maine. On the first of January the paper will appear in but with all its best features retained and with such improvements as we trust will insure an increase of that support which it has hitherto enjoyed.

LETTER CARRIERS

All letters are delivered free by carriers when addressed to street and number. People should inform their correspondents of above and have their letters addressed accordingly.

Persons leaving their address at the General Delivery can also have their letters sent, but it is much more convenient to have the street and number on, and they will be delivered earlier than if the same is put on at the office. Carriers make two deliveries daily, the first trip supplying the extremes of their routes.

Collections are made morning and evening in season for important mails—the down town boxes fifteen and the up town boxes thirty minutes before closing mails at the office.

Holidays the Carrier's Window will be open for the delivery of letters from 8½ to 9½ A. M. Also open evenings from 7½ to 8½ P. M.

Any irregularities in the Carriers' department should be reported to the office

ENVELOPES.

No additional charge will be made for printing the name and request to return, across the left hand upper corner of the Envelopes furnished by the Post Office Department, (samples of which may be seen at the Cashier's window,) when ordered in lots of not less than 500.

A request for the return of a letter to the writer, if unclaimed within thirty days or less, written or printed, with the writer's name, post office and State, across the left end of the envelope, on the face side, will be complied with.

The public are earnestly recommended to procure Stamped envelopes with printed return request, as the expense is less, and letters thus endorsed, if not delivered to the person addressed, are returned to the writer free of charge.

First class envelopes of above furnished at $32 80 per the usual.

Stamps cut from Stamped Envelopes cannot be used to prepay postage. The use of such Stamps is punishable by a fine of fifty dollars.

Stamped Envelopes, spoiled in directing, are redeemed at this office.
